What is really happening with the "data" part of Common Data Service? No, it's not just about the new storage model and licensing changes. In this blog post I explore the broader implications of what new technologies like Azure Data Lake, Cosmos DB and #PowerPlatform Connectors have on CDS for Apps, #MSDyn365 Customer Engagement and #PowerApps. <http://bit.ly/RealCDS>

Administer model-driven apps in Dynamics 365

10/01/2019 • 2 minutes to read • 66

Administrators can use the Dynamics 365 admin center (<https://port.crm.dynamics.com/G/manage/index.aspx>) to manage certain settings for their environments (earlier called instances) that also have model-driven apps from Dynamics 365 installed, such as Dynamics 365 Sales, Dynamics 365 Customer Service, Dynamics 365 Field Service, Dynamics 365 Marketing, Dynamics 365 Project Service Automation.

These model-driven apps were previously referred to as Dynamics 365 for Customer Engagement apps. However, effective October 2019, the Dynamics 365 for Customer Engagement S&D license plan is no longer available for "tailored" customers. More information: Dynamics 365 Licensing Update

The help content for Dynamics 365 admin center is available at Administer model-driven apps in Dynamics 365.

The content from the old admin guide is transitioning to the Power Platform admin guide as settings and features migrate to the Power Platform Admin center. Until the move to the Power Platform Admin center is complete, you'll still be able to manage settings through your apps as usual.

For example, many of these admin settings in the legacy web client...

Even more #Azure integration with #PowerPlatform is on its way: Application Insights can soon be used on CDS level to gather data on errors, performance, diagnostics. Private Preview coming in April: <https://jukkan.com/CDSAA> ...see more

Feature details

Common Data Service customers will be able to opt in to receive errors, performance data, and diagnostics data in their own Application Insights. The goal is to enable faster resolution of production issues associated with plug-in failures, form load issues with model-driven Unified Interface apps, and API issues. Customers are looking to set up alerts and enable support staff to dig deeper into diagnostic information for errors and performance issues. Customers are looking to understand, for example, if custom code issues are the cause for errors versus platform level errors. This data will initially be provided every 30 minutes to customers. This will be a private preview in the April time frame.
